

Technip Energies passes final performance acceptance test for Long Son Petrochemicals olefins plant in Vietnam

October 1, 2024

Technip Energies (PARIS:TE) announces that the Long Son Petrochemicals Co., Ltd. (LSP) olefins plant in Long Son Island, Ba Ria-Vung Tau province, Vietnam, passed its final performance acceptance test. Technip Energies provided licensing, engineering, procurement, construction, commissioning, start-up and initial operation for the 1350 KTA⁽¹⁾ cracker.

As Vietnam's first olefins plant, the flexible feed cracker, can utilize both naphtha and liquified petroleum gas feeds to produce ethylene, propylene, and butadiene ⁽²⁾.

The plant successfully started up end 2023 to reach its full capacity shortly after the start-up and pass its first performance test in February 2024. The plant, which broke ground end 2018, includes Technip Energies' licensed ethylene technology, including Ultra Selective Conversion (USC[®]) furnaces preferred for high selectivity and low cost, and the Heat-Integrated Rectifier System[®], preferred for energy efficient ethylene recovery.

Bhaskar Patel, Senior Vice President, Sustainable Fuels, Chemicals & Circularity, commented: "We are pleased with passing the final performance acceptance of the Long Son Petrochemicals' olefins plant. This is a great milestone for Vietnam and another example of our know-how to improve energy efficiency through our proven ethylene technology."

(1) KTA: kilo tonnes per annum

(2) 950 KTA Ethylene / 400 KTA Propylene / 80-107 KTA Butadiene
